Al's Hillary dances solo

THE lovely Hillary Geary wasn't with longtime squeeze Al D'Amato at the New York Hilton when he got the wrenching news Tuesday that he'd lost the election to Chuck Schumer.

Maybe the couple figured it was going to be a very long count and she was going to join them later, but Hillary was over at the Rainbow Room for the American Associates of the Royal Academy Trust's dinner dance, honoring former British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington.

It was a much happier place to be than D'Amato headquarters. Henry Kissinger (who most elegantly introduced His Lordship) later took to the floor with his wife, Nancy, and danced to the music of society band leader Bob Hardwick, along with the likes of Brooke Astor, Cyrus Vance, John Whitehead, Virgil and Betty Sherrill and a vast Palm Beach contingent.
